Recycled Music with Jeffrey Engel

August 8th at 7:00 pm

The Oxford Dictionary defines recycle as "to reclaim from waste." Many composers have done just that. When they were young some of their early compositions were not satisfactory to them or were poorly received by the public. Later in their careers such musical waste was recycled into better and more successful works. There were also composers who recycled the music of others and not always with permission. I guess one man's trash is another man's gold!! Jeffrey Engel will present several recycled works and in some cases compare the original to the version we know today. This program will be presented on Zoom so please register so you will receive the Zoom link in advance.
